

GOVERNMENT TO BACK FINANCING OF BURLEY POOL

The War Finance Body Pledges Loan If The Growers Are Organized On Co-operative Basis

RESERVE BOARD ALSO ACTS.

Financial support from the Federal Government in the marketing of the 1921 burley tobacco crop, thru the Burley Growers' Co-operative Marketing Association, organization of which is now nearly completed, was definitely assured, following several conferences between representatives of the preliminary committee of burley growers and Treasury Department officials.

Two important results obtained from the conferences, which, according to the committee representatives, guarantee the successful handling of the crop by the association, are:

First—Definite assurance given by the War Finance Corporation that if the burley growers organize under the proposed co-operative marketing plan the corporation will give any application made by the association the same consideration that already has been given to similar organizations of cotton growers, advances to which have been in excess of 50 per cent of the value of the crop.

Second—Presentation to the Federal Reserve Board of a request for a ruling that growers' drafts on the association, accompanied by weight tickets, shall be classified as agricultural paper, and indications of the officials that a favorable reply may be expected, which would entitle such paper to six months' credit, rather than three months allowed commercial paper.

Answers Last Criticism

The delegation representing the tobacco organization held a conference with the Board of Directors of the War Finance Corporation, at the conclusion of which confidence was expressed that the Federal authorities are ready to back the burley co-operative marketing movement, being organized in forty-one counties in Kentucky, two in Ohio and two in Indiana, to the same extent that it has been assisting similar organizations of cotton growers. This, it is held by the tobacco growers' committee, insures the financial stability of their organization from all criticism.

Representing the marketing association at the conference were: Judge Robert W. Bingham, chairman, Louisville; James C. Stone, Lexington; William E. Simms, Spring Station; James C. Wilson, Louisville; Charles N. Manning, Lexington, and W. C. Montgomery, Elizabethtown.

Statement On Conference.

Following the meeting between this delegation and the War Finance Corporation Board, Judge Bingham issued the following statement:

"The War Finance Corporation held a conference this morning with a committee representing the marketing co-operative association now forming to merchandise the burley tobacco produced in the United States, and after going over the plan of organization, stated to the committee that the board had heretofore agreed to advance in excess of 50 per cent of the value of certain crops, such as cotton, to co-operative marketing organizations formed on the California plan, this plan being the one adopted by the burley growers, and that if the burley growers organize under this plan and apply to the board, they may expect the same consideration given to similar applications, due regard being had to general conditions, financially and otherwise, and the proper organization and management of the burley growers' co-operative association."

All Asked For Granted.

"The War Finance Corporation Board has assured us that the Burley Growers' Co-operative Marketing Association will be given the same consideration that these other groups have received," said James C. Stone, Lexington, vice chairman of the committee.

"That is all we should ask for, and in all probability is considerably more than we shall need. The attitude taken by the corporation officials today removes every possible doubt of the successful financing of the burley growers through this as-

ROBERT H. TOMLINSON

Succumbs After Several Months Illness.

Hon. R. H. Tomlinson, 67 years old, born and raised in Garrard county and long identified with this city as one of its leading attorneys, died at his home on Richmond street yesterday morning after an illness of several months of tuberculosis.

He was a graduate of De Pauw University and Transylvania University and up to the beginning of his illness enjoyed one of the most lucrative legal practices in the city. He was prominent in church and fraternal orders, being a life long member of the Methodist church, a devout Mason, Odd Fellow and Knight of Pythias.

He was an ardent democrat in politics and twice represented Garrard county in the state legislature, during the sessions of 1889 and 1902 and was a member of the electoral college that elected Woodrow Wilson. At the time of his death he held the position of City Attorney, and was prominent at the bar throughout the State.

In 1877 he was married to Miss Mary Lou Morris, she predeceasing him in death about ten years ago. He is survived by three children, one daughter, Mrs. Alfred Brent, of Lexington, and two sons, Messrs. Harry Tomlinson and R. H. Tomlinson, Jr., both of this city. Two sisters, Mrs. Ross Adams and Mrs. Melvin Harris, of Lexington, also survive.

Funeral services will be held at his late residence on Richmond street Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, conducted by his pastor, Rev. Price T. Smith, of the Methodist church, in interment following in the Lancaster cemetery.

The pall bearers will be: Messrs. J. W. Elmore, R. E. McRoberts, James Spillman, E. W. Morrow, Milton Ward and Mayor J. M. Duncan.

TELLS HOW

HE DID IT Wins Prize On His Pig And One For Best Letter.

Robert Lillard Guiley, aged eleven years, was one of the prize winners at the recent pig and poultry show, winning on his Poland China gilt and he was awarded the prize for writing the best letter and telling just how he did it. We give it here in full.

"I picked my pig from a bunch owned by Mr. Steve Hill. I paid fifteen dollars for her. I used my Christmas money. I named my pig Lady Hester because that was the registration name. I selected the big type Poland China because I think it is the best hog raised in this neighborhood. They grow very large, are easily raised and produce large litters. The best hog men I know of raise Poland Chinas."

I brought my pig home in the car. I was busy for the next few days. I cleaned a stall to put her in and white-washed it. I bought middlings, crushed oats, corn meal, and tankage to feed her. She weighed 105 pounds. I have had a good deal of trouble driving her to the scales. I began feeding her a half pint each of middlings, crushed oats and corn meal with a half handful of tankage. I also gave her half a gallon of skim milk at a feed. I did not keep this up long for I could not get the milk. I had her on clover 75 days. I am now feeding five pints each of middlings and crushed oats and one each of tankage, and corn meal. I am giving some skim milk now. She weighs 305 pounds. I am getting her ready for the show."

Following their successful conference with the War Finance Corporation Board the delegation called on Gov. W. P. G. Harding of the Federal Reserve Board, and they emerged from this second conference with additional enthusiasm over the success of their mission in Washington.

The delegation urged that the Federal Reserve Board issue a ruling, classifying drafts made by growers on the association as agricultural paper, thus making them eligible for six months' credit, and they expressed the opinion that their argument had been favorably received.

CANTRILL HERE NEXT MONDAY

Will Address Farmers And Tobacco Growers.

One of the best informed men on the tobacco situation in the State is Hon. Cantrill Cantrill, of Georgetown, at present in the House of Representatives from that district. His services have been given freely to the Smirns plan of marketing tobacco and he will speak here in Lancaster next Monday afternoon, at one o'clock, at the court house.

He is able to convince the most skeptical and can explain every detail of this marketing system and every farmer and grower should be on hand and help boost the only salvation and hope the tobacco grower has left.

RELIGIOUS CENSUS

To Be Taken Of City And Suburbs Next Sunday.

A religious census of Lancaster and its environs will be taken next Sunday afternoon. Religious workers from the four white congregations of the town will gather the information filling out a separate information card for every individual from the youngest to the oldest. The workers, going by twos, will call at every home. It is believed that they will be cordially received and the information desired will be gladly given.

The object of the census is not to pry into any one's private business nor is it to change or attempt to change anybody's religious belief. Instead, it is believed that correct information of the church affiliations and religious conditions of our town and community will enable the churches to render more effective service, and that is what the churches desire to do.

Sometimes strangers are not shown much consideration because they are known to so few; sometimes in case of illness they are not visited and given the sympathy which they would appreciate because every minister and his congregation think that possibly the family belongs to another flock. Such possible situations would be obtained by more correct information. It is hoped, therefore, that every one will co-operate in this undertaking and that a complete and correct census may be taken.

Delightful

Home Coming

The home of Mr. and Mrs. David Prewitt, near Nina was the scene of one of the most delightful home comings of the Adkins family, on Sunday, Sept. 11th, when forty-five of the family met on that day to celebrate a reunion of this happy family.

Of the original family of 17, eleven are living and were at the reunion. Two of the brothers came from Missouri and together with one other brother and eight sisters, completed this happy family. It was a great and happy day for the mother, who was present and rejoiced with them, making it a day long to be remembered.

Some Choice Stock.

In the advertisement of the Dixie Stock Farms which will appear regularly throughout the year in the Central Record, will be found some choice stock for sale. This farm is the home of the Big Type Poland China hog and they are offering this week ten of the big type Poland China hogs for sale at prices that will be of interest to the farmer. Messrs. Sanders and Amon have achieved an enviable reputation with these hogs and the demand during the past year has been phenomenal. Drop them a card and let them make you a few prices.

Alumni Defeats L. H. S.

In the first game of foot ball of the season the Alumni of the Lancaster High School defeated Capt. Cox's team last Friday afternoon on the local gridiron by the score of 12 to 0.

The old men put up a good game and deserve much credit for the "Suffering" that they received. Capt. Cox tried out all the men and gave them all a chance. He said that he is ready for the Junction City lads on tomorrow, (Friday) afternoon.

NEW STORE, NEW STOCK

A. H. Bastin And Co. Open On Campbell Street.

One of the most important happenings dealing with the business interests of Lancaster, is the opening this week of the mercantile establishment of A. H. Bastin and Co., at their new store room on Campbell street, near the depot. When their stock is completed they hope to have one of the most complete lines found in any general country store.

One very attractive feature which this enterprising firm has inaugurated, is the free hitching lot adjoining their business and in their advertisement this week, they are asking and inviting all of their country friends to hitch and water their horses in this lot. Hitching places are being rapidly provided and every convenience will be supplied them. Thus, we believe is the only free hitching lot in the city and this firm is to be congratulated upon this innovation.

They will take care of all the country produce, giving the very highest market price and will sell to you for cash only, goods just a little bit cheaper, considering the quality.

The senior member of the firm is an old experienced business man and knows the business from the ground up. He will have associated with him his son, Clinton Bastin, a young man of ability and experience and we predict for them much success in their undertaking.

Legion Elects

Officers.

WM. F. MILLER RE-ELECTED COMMANDER.

The members of the American Legion met at the I. O. O. F. hall in Lancaster, Ky., last Friday night and elected the following officers for the ensuing year.

Commander—Wm. Ferguson Miller.

Vice Commanders—Dr. J. E. Edwards, Mark Jennings, Chas. Land and Rev. Willie P. Rogers.

Adjutant—Robert M. Meadows. Finance Officer—Benj. Wood, asst. Finance Officer Lewis R. Thompson.

Master at Arms—Sam Lee Herron. Athletic Officer—Richard Lackey. Executive Committee appointed by the Commander and Vice Commanders—A. D. Joseph, Alex. Doty and J. Wade Walker.

The above constitutes the officers of the Heidal Sanford Post No. 35. This was one of the best meetings ever held and a large crowd was present for the election of officers. The local post will try to make this the banner year for the Legion in this county.

The dues for the year 1922 was fixed at $3.50 for each member, this paying his Post, State and National dues for the year.

The next regular meeting will be held the first Tuesday night in October and as plans will be made for the year's work it is the earnest request of all members present on last Friday night that they all be present and bring with them one service man.

Will Attend Reunion.

We are in receipt of a letter from our good friend and subscriber, Mr. J. W. Ramsey, who many years ago made Lancaster his home, but at present living at Washington, Ind. He writes to tell his friends that he expects to attend the National Encampment of the old veterans of the Union at Indianapolis, on September 26th, to 30th, and that he would be delighted to meet some of his old friends from Garrard county. Mr. Ramsey was a member of Company C-19th-Ky-Inf., which was commanded by the late Col. W. J. Landrum, of Lancaster.

New Pastor Called

At a business meeting of the Baptist church last Wednesday evening, Rev. William E. Rix, of Berea, was unanimously called as its pastor for the ensuing year. Mr. Rix has preached on several occasions at a local church and the impression he had made on his congregation as a whole, was a result of the call by the board last week.

Mr. Rix will take up his work here next Sunday, preaching both morning and evening. The public is cordially invited.

BUSINESS MEN AND CITIZENS

Meeting Friday Night, Sept. 23, County Court Room.

To the business men and citizens of Lancaster—

We have reached the stage in the co-operative plan of marketing tobacco in the organization of the growers of Garrard county and feel that the time is now at hand when we must have the co-operation and influence of every business man in this city to bring this movement to a successful end. We feel that the citizens here do not realize the importance of this movement, which if successful means so much to every farmer and business man. In order to explain the seriousness of this matter more forcibly to you I am calling a meeting at the Court House Friday evening and earnestly insist that every business man and citizen of the town be present. Please don't let anything interfere with your attendance at this meeting.

Yours truly,

L. L. Walker, Chairman
Garrard County

HERO'S BODY

Brought Home For Burial

Remains of Fred Young, Lancaster

Who Made The Supreme Sacrifice Arrived Saturday

BURIAL LAST SUNDAY.

The remains of Fred Young, brave and gallant Lancaster boy who made the supreme sacrifice in the great world war, and son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Young, arrived at his old home last Saturday morning to be consigned to its last resting place under the sod of his native city and in the presence of loved ones and his hundreds of friends who knew and loved him in life.

It was in June 1917 that Fred Young enlisted in the great war at Cincinnati, joining Company F, of the 4th Infantry. On account of his extreme age, being then only 19 years old, he could not get the consent of his parents to enlist, but his patriotic blood could not see it that way and he was soon in active training. In the course of a few months he was sent to France and on October 23rd, 1918, he fell mortally wounded from a shell, just two weeks before peace was declared. He was a friend of Frank Jessie, of Danville, who was also killed in action while fighting beside his "buddy" Young.

Beside his parents, the young man is survived by six sisters and three brothers, all of whom have the sincere sympathy of the entire community.

The burial services took place in the Lancaster cemetery Sunday afternoon before a large crowd, the services being in charge of the local post of the American Legion.

Card Of Thanks

We are deeply grateful for the expression of sympathy and condolence shown us during our sorrow incident to the burial of our son and brother, Fred Young. To the Heidal Sanford Post we are especially thankful for its interests and services.

THE PROPOSED AMENDMENTS

Will It Take Schools Out Of Politics?

At the coming election in November there are to be voted upon two proposed amendments to the State Constitution affecting the whole fabric of the future public school system in Kentucky.

By Amendment No. 1 it is proposed to strike out that portion of the Constitution which provides that "a Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be elected by the qualified voters of the State for the term of four years and shall be ineligible for re-election." The objections to the present manner of election of the superintendent are that he must be nominated and elected by a political party; the office has come to be regarded as part of the political spoils and too often it is politically administered. It is also objected that the clause which prevents the superintendent from being re-elected means that every four years our educational policies and plans will be changed.

In the event of the passage of Amendment No. 1 it is proposed that the Legislature create a State Board of Education consisting of nine members who shall be men and women of broad capacity, of demonstrated ability, of high reputation, not more than five of whom shall belong to the same political party. This board shall have the power to appoint the superintendent. The Legislature may provide that this board shall be appointed by the Governor or that it shall be elected by the people.

The adoption of Amendment No. 2 will permit the Legislature, through the State Board of Education, to divert 10 per cent of the general school fund of the State to the schools of those counties in which the present available fund is insufficient to maintain schools up to the standard prescribed by law. The present law and the Constitution provide for the distribution of the whole of the general school fund on a per capita basis.

These amendments have been submitted on the recommendation of the Kentucky Educational Survey Commission. This commission was created by the Legislature at its last session and was composed of a group of Kentuckians of which Dr. W. A. Gamfield, president of Centre College, was chairman and Mr. Alex. Barret of Louisville was secretary.

Find Prehistoric Corn In Tennessee Stone Graves.

Corn that grew in Tennessee in prehistoric times, possibly before Joseph put away his seven years' supply in Egypt, was unearthed recently by W. E. Meyer, of the Bureau of American Ethnology, and sent to the United States Department of Agriculture for identification. During recent excavations in Davidson county, Tenn., Mr. Meyer came upon a number of stone slab graves containing mortuary vessels. Some of these held specimens of charred maize in fairly good condition. From the size and shape of the grains it was possible to identify the variety as Many-Rowed Tropical Flint, a form about half way between true flint and popcorn.

The same type of Indian corn occurs in the West Indies, and there is no question in the minds of scientists but that there was a very early communication between the West Indies and North America. Not only corn but beans, squashes, pumpkins, and tobacco are of tropical and sub-tropical origin. These staples, now so important throughout both hemispheres, found their way into North America and were cultivated beyond the Great Lakes in Canada long before the discovery of America. There is abundant evidence of communication between the West Indies and Florida, and up the Mississippi and its tributaries.

She Was "Just Out."

One Sunday two lovers went to church. When the collection was being taken up the young man explored his pockets, and finding nothing, whispered to his sweetheart: "I haven't a cent. I changed my pants."

Meanwhile the girl had been searching her bag, and finding nothing, flushed a rosy red and said: "I'm in the same predicament."

It would be wholly impracticable to attempt to adequately punish every man who commits a sin. There wouldn't be enough punishment to go around.

Tobacco Land Prices

(Louisville Times)

What began last winter as an inspiration in the mind of one man has become an establishment. The announcement of $2,000,000 pounds of burley already pledged to the co-operative assures the success of Judge Hincham's campaign to organize the burley growers in their own interest. From now forward intensive effort will be directed to rounding out the 75 cent pledge regarded as essential to marketing by the preliminary committee.

Pools have come and gone, and as such they are not new in Kentucky, but this co-operative is a new and sound idea. Its five-year duration of contract, its ingenious but secure financing system and its regulations of director control, relieve it of all the bad features of earlier pools. There is no doubt that the War Finance Corporation will aid the burley growers as soon as they complete their organization, and from that time on success in gaining a stable price for the product depends solely on pulling together under wise management. Organization of the growers of other types of tobacco will follow, until the tobacco farmer, like the grower of oranges and raisins, wheat and prunes, will have passed from under the burdens of the archaic system that has kept from him the due fruits of existence.

The Preliminary Committee, and all the county chairmen, have worked magnificently to attain their great end, and while the names of STONE and BARKER and KEHOE come first to mind there are many others who have toiled successfully and earnestly with these strong leaders. The Kentucky farmer is an independent and suspicious hombre, and it took strong and intelligent men to assure him that at least some people were trying to help themselves and him who did not want office out of it, or a lion's share of speculative profits. That happens to be true, as will be demonstrated.

Canada's Fur Farms

Some people seem to think that what will keep out cold will also keep out heat, so perhaps that is the reason that about the hottest day in July some woman with her dress to her knees will come out on the street with a split fox head and tail, about her neck. Again some old lady for fear that some traveler will keep a window up in the street car will put her old-fashioned fur piece across her shoulders before going down town to do her shopping. Furs are worn therefore at all times, in season and out, and hence the great demand for them, which it seems cannot be filled by merchants from the wild animals. Canada, knowing this, has gone into the raising of fur-bearing animals on a wholesale plan.

At this writing Canada has about 500 farms within her boundary, where fur-bearing animals are carefully nurtured, so that their tribes may increase. It is wonderful how fast they do increase when they are kept away from depredations of larger and fiercer animals. It is a paying proposition.

They're Smart.

Porkers Gain Rapidly On Soybeans And Corn.

That soybeans and corn grown together and hogged off are a profitable means of pork production is shown by the results obtained by Tom Wheatley, a Washington county farmer who co-operated with County Agent R. M. Heath and the extension division of the College of Agriculture in showing the value of this method. Nine hogs which were turned into a field of soybeans and corn each made an average gain of 41 pounds during the 15 days that they were on feed making a total of 370 pounds of pork produced by this method according to a report of the project. The animals weighed a total of 1,450 pounds when the demonstration started, and 1,820 pounds when it was finished.

Poultry Profits Require Good Management Of Flock.

Under present conditions with indications pointing toward an overproduction of poultry products the most certain means of insuring profit from the farm flock is to adopt the most efficient methods of management, poultrymen say. One step toward greater efficiency in the producing flock which can be taken by every poultry raiser is to cull the pullets and remove those that show by their physical characteristics that they are not capable of sustained high egg production, according to J. H. Martin, in charge of the college of Agriculture poultry work.

A study of the head of each bird is an important part of the culling operation with pullets, Mr. Martin said. The ideal pullet head should be short and broad with a short, well-curved beak, a bright prominent eye and plenty of depth of skull above the eye. At the same time the head should be trim and neat and show no signs of beefiness or masculinity. Since early maturity in pullets is one indication of their laying tendencies, the birds that show early reddening of the comb should be favored in the culling while those that have dull heads after a majority of the birds of the same age have started laying usually should be discarded. In body types the pullets that will make heavy layers will have well-sprung ribs and a back that is straight and broad. They will carry their width well out in the rump instead of being wedge-shaped back of the hips. The back of the promising pullet will have the same characteristics desired in the fine beef steer, that is, broad and flat on top with deep sides giving the bird a somewhat rectangular shape.

Any pullets that show long narrow heads, commonly known as "crow-headedness," that are late maturing, have poor chest development and pinch back or that lack depth of body measured by the distance from the end of the keel bone to top of the backbone should be discarded in the fall, the poultrymen say.

2. Contract no disease. This is important and should be followed by everyone, young and old. If no one contracted any disease the death rate would be much lower.

3. Never stand in front of a rapidly moving railroad train or automobile.

4. Marry early and if necessary, often. Although a married person (of either sex) may in reality not live longer than a single person, it seems longer.

5. Do not eat oysters without removing shells. Next to doughnuts, oyster shells are the hardest food to digest.

6. Do not call a man a liar anywhere west of the Mississippi or south of the Mason and Dixon line. It is much safer in the East.

7. Do not smoke a cigarette or cigar in a celluloid collar factory.

8. Never be an innocent bystander. That is the most dangerous occupation in the world.

9. Do not go into Wall Street and yell "Hurrah for Leon Trotsky!"

10. Mend your own business, don't interfere in family quarrels, don't eat tinners' meals without removing the tins, and if you would reach a ripe old age, above all things, don't die!

Any one can criticize, but it often requires brains to interpret the criticism.

Fordson TRACTOR

*625.00
F. O. B. Detroit

Henry Ford Was Right When He Said:

'The Tractor will enable the farmer to work fewer hours in the day, giving him more time to enjoy life. I believe the tractor will make farming what it ought to be—the most pleasant, the most healthful, the most profitable business on earth.'

This tractor has done much—very much—in bringing true Mr. Ford's prophecy; for in it is a machine which has harnessed one of the most dependable, efficient, adaptable, economical sources of power in the world—a machine that saves from thirty to fifty per cent of the farmer's time—a machine which many farmers claim plows, harrows or drills as much ground in the same time as four, six or even eight horses. And more—a machine that takes care of every power job on the farm.

Call and let's talk it over, or telephone or drop us a card and we will bring the facts to you.

Her Money Was Gone

An old woman who lived alone had kept nearly $2,000.00 in currency around her house for years. She was afraid of banks.

Last fall she became seriously ill, and—No, she didn't die. But when she went to look for the cash it was gone! Fortunately some honest friends had found it while she was unconscious and had deposited it to her credit in a bank.

This woman has now decided that after all the bank is the safest place, and, besides, her money is not idle any longer. It is now earning 4 per cent for its owner.

Let us put your money to work for you.

As The Editor Sees It.

While at peace the wise man devises ways and means of perpetuating peace.

Early in November the wise ones of many nations of the earth will gather together in Washington. They will talk peace in an effort to prevent further wars. Disarmament will be their principal theme.

Japan, it is stated, will send two hundred of her ablest statesmen and international experts. Apparently Japan does not propose to allow anything to be "put over" on her, if numbers and brains can prevent. The Japanese delegates will be suave and polished while in Washington, but they will be in deadly earnest. Not a word or a gesture will escape them. It is with the demands of Japan that we of America are most vitally concerned.

England, France, Italy, Belgium, China and other countries will send their shrewdest and craftiest of men to safeguard their own particular interests at the meet. Every sleeve will be full of cards ready to be placed at the psychological moment.

It is with men of this stamp and calibre that the secretary of state and his delegate-aids will be called upon to cope, and it is no reflection upon their mentality to state that their strategy will be taxed to the limit. We are assuming, of course, that Secretary Hughes will head the American delegation.

Undoubtedly, as has been our custom in the past, the American cards will be laid upon the table, faces upward. But they will hardly be joined by the cards of other nations. That is hardly to be expected of men who have been trained in an atmosphere of secret diplomacy. The American delegates will skirmish in the open against adversaries who are concealed in a fog of doubt and uncertainty.

Then there is another influence—a sinister one—which will harass the American delegates, and may even attempt to fog the issue among the foreigners. Munitions manufacturers and others who profit from warfare do not want perpetual peace. International financiers of Wall street are of this class. If the conference puts an end to warfare it also puts an end to billions upon billions of fat profits that would otherwise flow into the swollen pockets of these fellows. They will do their utmost to prevent a lasting peace.

But they are not the only ones who will "butt in." The woools are full of senators and congressmen and notoriety seeking politicians who will be button-holing delegates by the wholesale. Some will be lobbyists for the "interests," while others will see in it a means of creeping into print. The whole gang will be there with bells on.

Again, this is a "dry" country, and presumably all our friends from abroad will bring their "liquid refreshments" with them. The government could hardly object to this without being discourteous. This puts another temptation in the way of our American delegates—such a temptation. A parched throat gets mighty dry and its owner will often do very queer things for just a little nip. When a fellow is "properly mellowed" he is easy to handle, and the "mellowing" process will undoubtedly be worked to a finish by the astute gentlemen from over the seas.

Truly, the American footsteps will be beset with both thorns and roses, and it will require the wisdom of the ancients to successfully sidestep them.

Naylor.

On Sunday morning, Sept. 18th, 1921 at 6 o'clock a pair of sadness came over the community when it was learned that the angel of Death hovered her icy wings around the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eldus Naylor and claimed their oldest and loving son, Edmund Naylor. He had been ill for two weeks and all that loving hands could do was done but to no avail. He bore his suffering without a murmur and bravely fell asleep with Jesus.

He was thirteen years of age and the pride of the family. Just as he was blooming into young manhood it seemed sad to give him up but he that giveth taketh all things his last and dying words were, "Do not grieve about me, for I am going to a beautiful place prepared for me and to which I am ready to go."

He leaves a mother, father, three sisters and three brothers, beside a host of friends to mourn his loss. The remains were laid to rest Monday afternoon in the Lancaster cemetery beneath a beautiful mound of flowers to await the coming of a brighter day.

One by one our Father gathers
Flowers so rich and rare,
And transplants them in his garden,
There to bloom forever more.

He is blooming, sweetly blooming,
Mid the fairest flowers of light
In the Garden of Sweet Eden,
Where the flowers never die.

We on earth no more shall see him,
But the Angels are his guide
And we know that he is ever
Near the blessed Savior's side.

May we hope some day to meet him,
In that land of endless day
There to dwell forever
In that happy home above.

—An Aunt, V. H. R.

Tulips are more responsive to dyes than carnations or orchids, a Chicago florist found by experimenting. When dyes of various colors were dissolved in water and the flowers placed therein, the colors progressed up into the blooms of the tulips in about thirty minutes.

Austria's Hat Industry.
Of all the industries of Austria, there are few which are dependent to such a small extent on the importation of raw materials as the hat industry. The hair of rabbits and hares, which is used to such a great extent in certain lines, is produced almost entirely within Austrian frontiers.

To Clean Window Shades.
To dry clean a window shade, spread it full length on the kitchen table or on the floor and rub it thoroughly all over with dry salt and corn meal, renewing the mixture as it becomes soiled. Then dust well with a soft duster. The shade need not be removed from the roller, and this method does not pull it out of shape or cause it to crack.

Farmers May Get Fooled By Loafer Hens In Flock.

Culling is the one sure means of picking out the loafer hen in spite of the fact that the owner sometimes thinks the wrong birds have been removed, according to Miss Joyce Syler, Home Demonstration Agent, who is planning to hold a number of demonstrations to show farmers and their wives of this section how to tell the non-laying hen from the heavy laying one. This fact was demonstrated in one of the culling demonstrations held last year on the flock of Senator H. M. Froman, of Ghent.

A specialist from the poultry department of the College of Agriculture culled 31 hens out of a flock of 60 Barred Plymouth Rocks owned by Senator Froman and placed them in a pen by themselves. When Senator Froman returned home he questioned the correctness of the selection which had been made and declared that in his estimation the wrong hens had been placed in the pen for culls. He sold the selected loafers one week later, however, upon discovering that during the seven days the 29 hens had laid as many eggs as the 60 had laid the preceding seven days while the 31 hens had lived up to their titles of loafers and not laid an egg.

"These results are typical of those which may be found on many farmsteads," said the specialist. "The loafer is not only a non-producer of eggs but she is also able to fool the farmer into thinking that she is laying. It will be the object of the demonstrations which will be held to show the farmers how to pick out these loafers. We intend to show the differences and then distribute literature which will make it possible for the farmers and their wives to go home and pick out the hens which have stopped laying to loaf until spring."

American Legion News

Representation in the American commission to the international disarmament congress November 11 by at least one soldier of the world war was asked of President Harding recently by the American Legion's national legislative committee at Washington. "There is a group in the nation that knows as much about war and has as vital an interest in the problem of war and peace as the ex-service men of the country," the Legion declared. The committee also urged Secretary Hoover to give the Legion representation on behalf of service men in the unemployment conference soon to be held.

During the celebration of "Buddy Week" in Baltimore recently, a relay of 24 American Legion runners carried the "buddy proclamation" from President Harding at Washington to the mayor of Baltimore. Service men from several eastern and southern states attended the meeting.

Use of New York state's many armories as places of shelter for jobless soldiers is being considered by William F. Deegan, American Legion representative on New York City's committee on unemployment. The Overseas Women's League recently offered services of its members to put the armories in condition for the men's occupancy. Fully 50,000 ex-service men are among the city's army of unemployed, according to Mr. Deegan.

Thirty-three bands already have registered for the $1,750 prize musical contest during the national convention of the American Legion at Kansas City this fall. In the list are bands from New York, Massachusetts, Ohio, Michigan, Texas, Oklahoma, Indiana, Oregon, Kansas and Missouri.

Men who accepted officers' commissions for the world war only and who were wounded or disabled should be retired with pension the same as are officers of the regular army, the American Legion's national legislative committee declared recently in praying Secretary of War Weeks to extend the privilege of them. The selective service law and an opinion of the army's judge advocate general were cited as justifying the claim.

To assist in riding the city of prowlers, petty thieves and holdups, the American Legion post of Wichita, Kas., recently volunteered the services of its 500 members. Due to numerous attacks on women and the resultant panic in their ranks, the chief of police and the city manager accepted the offer. The service men will patrol the streets.

More than three years after he had been gassed at Chateau Thierry, Richard Cross, American Legion veteran of Des Moines, Ia., suddenly was stricken blind recently while sitting at home playing with his baby. Physicians blame the Germans' poison for his plight and entertain no hope for his recovery.

No mystery surrounds the shooting in Nashville, Tenn., recently of Carl Peters, world war veteran. He refused to take a drink. Carrying out his American Legion injunction of "law and order," Peters when accosted on the street late at night by a hospitable bootlegger, politely declined a proffered draught of white whiskey. The h. b. insisted and when Peters still refused, the former drew a pistol and fired. The ex-soldier went to a hospital with a bullet in his leg and the moonshine merchant went to jail.

Major General John A. Lejeune, commandant of the United States Marine Corps, will go to Kansas City this fall to visit the men who safely chauffeured him through France while he was commanding the famous Second Division, A. E. F., according to word received from him last week by the American Legion convention committee. Incidentally General Lejeune also will attend the Legion's national convention there. He will be driven through the quieter streets of the convention city by his erstwhile battle chauffeur, Victor H. Leune, Kansas City.

The governors of Missouri and Kansas and the mayors of Kansas City, Kan., and Mo., joined in a formal expression of the honor they feel at the coming visit to Marshal Fuch to those states and cities to attend the national convention of the American Legion this fall. A memorial to this effect was presented the French generalissimo by Charles W. Barlett, Kansas City, at the recent dedication of the Elfre monument in France.

The Tobacco Co-operative.

(Courier Journal)
Supporters of the plan to market tobacco co-operatively who express the opinion that the adoption of the plan will steady and advance and values in the tobacco counties make a reasonable argument.

A tobacco planter's plant, in the business sense of the term, is a farm and its equipment. His equivalent of factory operatives can be procured year after year. He must find his profit—his reason for operating his plant—in finding a market in which he can sell what he produces for more than the cost of production. If he is without a fair chance in the market he is in the situation of a manufacturer who has a complete equipment for producing a costly article or commodity, but is without means of selling his product upon a basis that warrants the operation of the plant.

A good deal of tobacco land in the white burley district was bought high during the war. Some of it was bought too high, but the demoralized state of the market for tobacco land is due to demoralization of tobacco prices in a market in which the planter has not a fair chance rather than to the effect that land was not bought conservatively.

Kentucky planters who bought more land than they could pay for in cash and who have witnessed their equity shrink, but with land on their hands that cannot be sold save at a sacrifice are in a dilemma, not so much because they paid too much for their land as because there is too little prospect, under the old marketing plan, to get regularly a fair price for tobacco.

The adoption of the plan of co-operative marketing would steady the value of tobacco land and simplify the problem of the planters who are in difficulties because their land notes are large, their interest high and their hope of profits slender.

A factory without a selling organization is, so long as it remains without a selling organization, a bad investment to hold. It is a poor investment to convert into cash unless a buyer is found who will undertake to organize the selling end of the business. No individual can organize the selling end of a plant consisting of land and equipment which produces tobacco. Only by organization of growers can organization of the selling end be effected.

When it is asserted that Kentucky tobacco land during the war brought "ridiculous prices" the assertion cannot be based upon anything but acceptance of the old plan of selling tobacco as the permanent plan. Where selling is organized, as for example in California prune, raisin and citrus fruits regions, the acreage prices of productive land are

Supporters of the plan to market tobacco co-operatively who express the opinion that the adoption of the plan will steady and advance and values in the tobacco counties make a reasonable argument.

Reasonable buyers always will buy and reasonable sellers always will hold farm lands at prices relative to the returns upon operation which may be counted upon reasonably. For many years Kentucky tobacco lands have sold at much less than they would have been worth had a fair annual profit on good tobacco been assured.

Exhibit By Southern Gets New Industries.

New York. Prospects are bright for the location of several important industries in the South as the result of the Southern Railway System's exhibit of mineral and chemical resources of the territory it serves at the Seventh National Exposition of Chemical Industries in New York which came to a close on Saturday, September 17th.

Wide attention was attracted to the remarkable opportunities for industrial development in the South by the Southern's exhibit which was the only one made by an American Railway. The exposition proved a great success, the total attendance having been over 100,000, made up almost entirely of chemical experts and manufacturers interested in the development of new industries and looking for favorable locations.

Throughout the week the Southern's booth was thronged by visitors, many of whom were amazed at the showing of Southern resources, particularly as to the great variety of minerals needed for the new chemical industries which are now being developed in America.

PROPER GRADING

Will Bring Top Tobacco Prices.

Kentucky farmers can do much to obtain better prices for their tobacco by careful attention to the stripping and grading of their crops, tobacco specialists who have made a study of the various markets say. Many growers who have practiced careful grading have realized as much as two and one-half cents above the season's average price while conditions in all tobacco growing sections of the State indicate that this practice could be followed profitably by growers. Speculators also have demonstrated the increase profits to be gained by grading, many of them having realized substantial gains by buying poorly-graded leaf and reselling it after it had been properly sorted.

Grading will not improve the quality of leaf one has to sell but it will enable the farmer to make the most of what he has whereas indifferent or no grading at all reduces the price received on the entire lot. This is true since buyers are compelled to bid low enough to insure themselves against the risk of buying a low quality or worthless product. In buying any product the purchaser prefers well-graded lots rather than those which are mixed. This is especially true in tobacco, the specialists say.

Dozen Cull Hens Produce Three Eggs In Seven Days.

Culling was the means of removing 12 non-producers of eggs from the flock of 60 White Plymouth Rock hens owned by George Hill, a Marshall county farmer, according to a report he has just made on a demonstration conducted by the College of Agriculture extension division. The week before the culling the 60 hens produced a total of 61 eggs while the week following the 48 hens which were retained as layers produced 43 eggs while the 12 culls laid only three.

Drainage Would Raise
Kentucky Crop Yields.

With 573,299 acres of Kentucky farm land reported in the 1920 census as needing drainage, indications are that the crop yields from certain areas of the State could be materially increased provided these were given the proper improvement, according to farm engineering specialists at the College of Agriculture. The same census reports that of the 21,612,772 acres of farm land in the State only 13,975,746 acres have been improved. A special census of drainage enterprises in the State also shows that there are approximately 358,480 acres of land in operating drainage enterprises. Since drainage on farms of the State may be either inside or outside of an organized enterprise the figures for both are given to show the status of improvements on Kentucky farms. More than 19,592 farms in the State reported the need of drainage in the 1920 census.

That the yields from the undrained areas of the State could be increased is shown by results in experiments conducted by various stations, the specialists say. Indiana reports that in one test the average yields an acre were 3.6 bushels of corn and 1,923 pounds of stover on undrained land and 59.5 bushels of corn and 3,289 pounds of stover on drained land. Wheat averaged 4.3 bushels of grain and 343 pounds of straw an acre on undrained land and 10 bushels of grain and 800 pounds of straw on an acre of drained land. Hay averaged 3,670 pounds an acre on undrained land and 310 pounds on the drained.

CAUSES FOR RUNT ANIMALS

Replies to Questionnaire Show Inferior Breeding and Poor Feeding Are Responsible

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

More than 500 replies have been received from practical stock breeders and owners in response to a questionnaire sent out by the United States Department of Agriculture in an effort to determine the cause and possible means of preventing runts in live stock. The large number of replies department specialists say, indicates the interest which stock breeders feel in this subject. Some of the questions asked in the questionnaire are: "From your experience, in what classes of live stock do the most runts appear? cattle, hogs, sheep, etc.?" "In what stage of an animal's development does runtness appear chiefly?" "In your experience what are the most practical methods of preventing runts?" "Does it pay to raise runts to market size?" "To what extent would your financial returns from live stock be increased if you had no runts?"

The replies thus far received show that inferior breeding and poor feeding are jointly responsible for nearly two-thirds of the runts among live stock, and indicate that at least 7 per cent of farm live stock is commonly in the runt class. Detailed data on the times when runtness appears financial losses caused by runt stock, methods of prevention, when it pays and when it does not pay to raise runt stock are now being prepared by the department for distribution to the public.

GET FIGURES ON PUREBREDS

Bureau of Census Completing Tabulation for States Not Yet Shown in Reports.

On account of the great interest which the United States Department of Agriculture finds has been shown in census figures of purebred live stock in ten representative farm states, the bureau of the census is proceeding with plans to complete the tabulation for the remaining states. This work is receiving the hearty co-operation of the United States Department of Agriculture. Live stock specialists of the department regard such figures as very valuable as factors in production problems, and as indicating developments in the improvement of domestic animals in this country.

It is understood that the final census figures pertaining to purebred live stock on farms will be available at the same time the general live stock figures are furnished. It is thought that this will be some time during the coming summer. Breeders and breeders' associations interested in this work have already indicated their appreciation of the value of the figures thus far available. It is the first time in the history of any country that accurate figures on the total number of purebred animals on farms have been compiled.

CARE AND FEEDING OF STOCK

Vermont Live Stock Owner Says Cause of Runts Is Due to Neglect During First Year.

In contributing his experiences on the cause of runt live stock in a recent inquiry conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture, a Vermont farmer urges greater care in the early life of domestic animals. "When people can be educated to the proper care and feeding of stock," he declares, "the runt will be practically wiped out. The reason, perhaps, why there are not so many runts in purebred herds as in others is because the man who cares what kind of stock he keeps cares enough to care for them better." He concludes that one of the principal factors in the cause of runt live stock is the man who has the care of them the first year.

What's Your Idea?

What is the most crying need of the hour in this town—a need that could be supplied by our local authorities?

We would like to have some answers to this question for publication in the columns of our paper. The answers should be brief and to the point.

Our local authorities are of our best citizenry. They are eminently practical, and are capable of absorbing and making the most of the diversified ideas that would thus be presented to them.

Think the matter over with care, and then write us your opinion of what is most needed in this town.

No matter how brilliant your personal idea may be, it can be of no value to the community unless you make it public.

That is what we seek—publicity of ideas. It is good for us all. Spring yours!

TONY'S RETURN

By KITTY PARSONS.

Copyright, 1921, Western Newspaper Union.

George Almslee was proposing to Joan for the fourteenth time when someone came out on the porch and introduced her to a man she had loved ever since she was nineteen—ten whole years. He had told her he loved her at the senior prom, but they were both so frightfully young that they had decided to wait a whole month before becoming definitely engaged. Then, if Tony still felt the same—which he felt sure he would—he would write at once and tell her so. Before the month was up Joan had been forced to go abroad with her parents, but had made Aunt Maria promise to forward all mail there had been plenty of letters from Harrison Davies all that miserable summer, but not one single line from Tony.

"He just found he didn't care enough," Joan told herself bravely and she tried very hard to put him out of her mind. The following year her mother and father were killed in an accident and she had married Harrison Davies, who seemed to be the only possible solution of her troubles. But Harrison had not made her happy and although she had stuck staunchly by her guns through all her married life, when he died five years later she could not honestly mourn him. She had never forgotten Tony. When he had been wounded in France she had shamelessly bought every paper she could find that might have some possible news of him, and she had prayed for him every night.

For three years Joan had worked at reconstruction work in France and now on her arrival home, her old friend George Almslee had again begun his proposals, which had started immediately after her husband's death. And then Tony had suddenly stepped upon the scene of action.

It was dark out there on the porch and the man was suddenly unconscious of the fact that he had ever seen her before.

"May I have this dance, Mrs. Davies?" he asked her.

"If you don't mind staying outside, I'm so hot that I don't want to go in side."

Then suddenly, when the others had left them, he turned to her:

"Do you know—I believe I've met you before."

Joan laughed lightly. "I'm probably a type," she coaxed him quickly. "Tell me the story of your life, please—I adore romances."

Tony flushed in the darkness. "I'm afraid I haven't had much of that sort of thing—since my college days at least."

"Can't I help you, Joan—I'd do anything in the world I could."

"How did you know me?" she asked in surprise.

"Well, when a man carries a girl's picture in his pocket for ten years he can generally recognize her when he meets her on the street."

"Oh, you haven't done that—I mean you mustn't; why have you got it there?"

"Because I love you—I always have."

"Oh, Tony, you can't! You never wrote and I waited and waited and waited."

"Oh, Joan darling—it's all been a mistake somewhere. Joan, please."

"Gracious, Joan! I've been looking everywhere for you—everyone is leaving."

George's voice broke in upon any possible explanation and Joan sprang to her feet.

"Goodby, Mr. Rossiter," she said to Tony.

Joan passed a sleepless night and left on the earliest train the following day. By Friday noon she had about made up her mind to give George the answer he wanted when he came that night.

She was cleaning out some old photographs in her desk when the doorbell rang earlier than she had expected. As she started to escape, she almost ran into Tony Rossiter.

"Joan," he began, blocking the exit with both arms. "I know you don't want to see me, but I had to bring you something. I really did write you, and it was returned to me unopened—I thought you did it, of course."

Blindly Joan took the battered old envelope from his hands. It was dated ten years before. She understood now—it had been Aunt Maria's work; she had always wanted her to marry Harrison, and had discouraged any possible friendship with Tony. Slowly, she read the belated words:

"Darling—I care for you more than anyone else in the world. I've thought I loved other girls but I know I love you—especially now that I've been away from you for a whole month, and am nearly dead with loneliness. Please write me—I'll be waiting for your letter every day. I'm going to love you always—I'm not half good enough for you, but no one could love you any more. Always yours

"TONY."

Joan let the letter fall to the floor and buried her face in her hands.

"I love you," whispered Joan, as she pressed her cheek against the lapel of his coat.

A few moments later there was a loud peal at the bell.

"Mary! Mary!" called Joan, in alarm. "Tell Mr. Almslee I've been suddenly called away and will write him tonight."

At last, she had everything in the world that she wanted.
